

Bush weighs options but waits to react

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush considered options ranging from military force to economic sanctions against Panama on Tuesday in preparation for what the White House said were efforts by strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega to steal the presidential election.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said any U.S. action would depend on an announcement in Panama of the outcome of Sunday's voting and on a declaration by Noriega of what he intends to do.

Our policy remains that Noriega must go," Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater did not say what alternatives were being discussed, telling reporters that the president and his national security advisers "have been considering options that range from use of military force to various economic and commercial moves related to a U.S. presence in that country."

Noriega himself was vague about U.S. intentions. Asked by reporters about his intentions, the president said, "Patience, patience — a great virtue in life."

Fitzwater said officials were talking with democratic U.S. allies in Central America to enlist their support in the anti-Noriega campaign. The United States has been trying for more than a year to oust Noriega, who is under U.S. indictment on drug-smuggling charges.

There were these other developments:

Former President Carter, who was a private observer group in Panama, was to meet with Bush late in the day to relay his observations. Monday he called the voting an "outrageous fraud."

Two days earlier, the official U.S. delegation reported to Bush that, in the words of its chairman, "We didn't see a way that it could be a free and fair election."

Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard said the Defense Department

ment had alerted American servicemen stationed in Panama and their dependents to avoid travel around the country.

"We have a very uneasy situation in Panama," Howard said. Fitzwater told reporters that U.S. military personnel in Panama had been harassed and were on a "very high state of alert."

•The State Department contradicted a Panamanian government assessment that, based on returns from four of 40 election districts, Noriega's handpicked presidential candidate, Carlos Duque, was leading opposition candidate Guillermo Endara by 80,646 votes to 54,437.

Rather, said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher, the administration believes Panamanians voted by margins of two or three to one to replace Noriega's regime.

Fitzwater said American officials were "convinced that the opposition candidate had the support and the votes to fairly win this election and we are just as convinced that the Noriega regime made every effort, took every opportunity, had every intention of stealing this election regardless of the actual vote."

Members of the official delegation sent by Bush met with him at the White House and later called the voting a sham.

"We told the president that we saw such widespread irregularities and actual fraud that we didn't see any way that it could be a free and fair election," said Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., the delegation's head.

He said there was "a sense of urgency" about the need for action.

Another member of the delegation, Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., urged Bush to withdraw U.S. military dependents and citizens from Panama while beefing up the number of combatants among the 10,000 U.S. troops there.

Fitzwater hinted that provisions of the 1977 Panama Canal treaties might be used to intensify pressure against Noriega.

Salt Lake in final 4 for Olympic bid

Salt Lake City and three other cities were selected Tuesday by the U.S. Olympic Committee (USOC) to continue in the bidding process for the 1994 Winter Olympics, said a USOC spokesman.

The four cities — Salt Lake City, Denver, Anchorage and Reno-Lake Tahoe — will make formal presentations to the USOC in Des Moines, Iowa, on June 4.

The competition is going to be tough. The other cities involved are going to be working hard to be selected as we will be," said Tom Welch, director of the committee working on Salt Lake City's Winter Olympic bid. The Utah Olympic Bid Committee will be working on a multimedia presentation to be shown at the June 4 meeting with the USOC. The presentation will show the proposed Winter Olympic venue sites, Salt Lake City's transportation and hotel accommodations and Utah's winter climate, said Lt. Gov. Val Oveson a member of Utah's Olympic Bid Committee.

"The presentation will also show Utah's countryside and culture. We want to show them (the USOC) what we have to offer," said Oveson.

The Utah Olympic Committee will have spent approximately $200,000 of private funds in the bidding process, said Welch. "We will need to have our printed materials to the U.S. Olympic Committee by May 19," he said. "We've got work to do before the June 4 presentation in Iowa."

"We feel the Utah Olympic Committee has done a wonderful job promoting Utah's bid for the 1994 Winter Olympics," said Bud Scruggs, spokesperson for Governor Bangerter. "We are supporting the committee in their efforts to prepare for the presentation, and we are willing to do anything we can to help them in that effort," he said.

Lt. Gov. Oveson said he and Gov.

6 sailors killed in shipboard fire

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Six sailors were killed and five injured Tuesday when an intense fire erupted in the engine room of a Navy supply ship heading home from a deployment supporting Persian Gulf operations, the Pentagon said.

Crewmen aboard the USS White Plains, a food stores ship, battled the blaze for more than an hour before bringing it under control, officials said. The ship was in the South China Sea about 100 miles east of Hong Kong at the time.

The Pentagon spokesman, Dan Howard, said that the fire occurred "in the main engine spaces." A Navy source said it apparently involved a fuel leak in and around the ship's No. 3 boiler.

The 581-foot White Plains is based at the Pacific island of Guam and is crewed by a normal complement of 403 enlisted men and 25 officers.

Anxious relatives of crew members gathered at the military chapel on Guam Tuesday, awaiting word on the accident. Some wives had just returned to Guam after visiting their husbands during a port call in Hong Kong.

The accident occurred three weeks after an explosion inside a gun turret on the battleship Iowa left 47 sailors dead.

Questions have been raised about whether the Iowa explosion was due to faulty powder or human error, but officials have not yet said what caused the accident.

Howard, with a curt, one-word reply of "None," dismissed the idea the fire aboard the White Plains might suggest problems with Navy training or equipment maintenance.

In addition to the six dead, five other crewmen were injured. None of the victims were immediately identified.

A Navy statement said the identities of the dead were being withheld pending notification of the next of kin.

Howard and Navy spokesmen said the five suffered primarily second-degree burns and were airlifted to the military hospital at Clark Air Base in the Philippines.

A spokeswoman there, Air Force Capt. Donna Eggleston, said they were listed in stable condition.

After the fire was extinguished, the White Plains was taken under tow to Subic Bay Naval Base in the Philippines for repairs.

Military sources who demanded anonymity said it had taken a full hour to control and then extinguish the blaze. The sources said the fire grew so hot that sailors were limited to five-minute stints in fighting the blaze.

Howard said the White Plains and four other Navy ships were steaming almost due east of Hong Kong after completing their port call and were about 100 miles from land at the time of the fire.

The four other ships included the aircraft carrier Constellation, the cruiser Fox, the frigate Ouellet, and the oiler Sacramento.

The Constellation battle group was steaming for home after duty in the northern Arabian Sea supporting the naval task force in the Persian Gulf.

A Navy official who asked not to be identified said preliminary information suggested the fire involved "a fuel leak in the boiler manifold intake on the No. 3 boiler."

The source said it was unclear at this point whether the failure involved human error or an equipment failure.

Navy records do not indicate any past serious problems aboard the White Plains.

According to the Navy, the White Plains is 581 feet long, 79 feet wide and displaces about 16,000 tons when fully loaded.

Choose life, students told Reckless decisions may damage spirituality

By KRISTIN R. HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Students were told to find God as their master at Tuesday's devotional assembly in the de Jong Concert Hall.

"Let us this day choose him, knowing that if we do, we choose life," said Dennis F. Rasmussen, associate professor of philosophy.

Rasmussen said the gift to choose is not merely a command or a power, but rather a gift from God.

The only way to keep this gift, however, is to use it, he said. "In a spiritual sense, to stop choosing is also to stop living."

Rasmussen said, "Spiritual life may be damaged by reckless choices."

He said choosing is not acting on impulse or doing what we want. Choosing involves thinking and weighing alternatives.

Choosing does not mean rushing after every passion and appetite — it means using rules, training, and discipline, said Rasmussen.

We will eventually discover that rules "achieve the ends for which they are working." Our end, he said, is eternal life.

Rasmussen compared this principle to a musician or athlete who becomes subject to the rules of a teacher or coach if they want to achieve their end.

He said law is the means by which the Lord sanctifies and perfects us and gives us eternal life.

Reaching an all-time high

Child abuse in Utah County is rising

Editor's note: This is the second in a three-part series on problems relating to child abuse

"No person can be better than the law of his life," said Dennis F. Rasmussen, associate professor of philosophy, at Tuesday's Devotional Assembly.

Child abuse in Utah County has reached an all-time high and continues to rise according to many local authorities on child abuse.

Jeanette Riehle, a social worker with the Utah State Division of Family Services, said the number of abuse and neglect referrals in Utah County has doubled in the last three months.

"We only see the tip of the iceberg," said Dianne Warner-Kearney, a protective service worker at the Utah State Division of Family Services, whose responsibility it is to investigate allegations of child abuse and neglect. "We'll never really know how many cases there are that we never see."

The American Humane Association estimates that for every reported case of child abuse or neglect, there are more than two that go unreported.

According to Lynn Jacobson, child protection supervisor for Family Services, 45 percent of the reported cases are actually substantiated. Jacobson attributes the rise in referrals to the public becoming more aware that the problem exists locally and that it has a moral duty and responsibility to report it.

According to Lynn Roundy, executive director of Parents United, a counseling treatment center for sexually abused victims and their families, the problem of child abuse is not limited to or significantly more or less prevalent among any social, economic, racial or religious group. "Cruelty to children occurs at all societal levels," Roundy said.

"The best way to combat the problem of child sexual abuse is through education," Roundy said. "The best cure is prevention ... we need to educate our children on how to prevent sexual abuse, while at the same time educating parents and adults as to the devastating effects sexual abuse can have on a child's life and development ... an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

The Family Support Center of Provo aids in the prevention of child abuse by offering a 24-hour respite nursery, for frustrated and stressed parents that need a break. "We hope by providing this service we are helping to prevent child abuse," said Rhonda Caywood, interim director of the Family Support Center. "We don't want to provide a Band-Aid solution to the problem, but want to educate parents and provide them with new ways of coping with stress and anger."

According to Caywood, the center also teaches a variety of different programs which include adult and adolescent parenting classes, a sexual abuse prevention class geared towards elementary age children called, "You're in Charge," and stress management classes for small children.

"Teaching stress management to children is the key to breaking the abuse chain," Caywood said. "The problem is children learn and develop the same coping skills their parents use when dealing with stress and anger ... it's such a generational thing."

According to the American Association for Protecting Children, 80 to 100 percent of all prison inmates were abused as small children. Child abuse not only victimizes the child and his or her family, but also the innocent people of our society.

"Our children are the future of our community, whether or not we have children we are all affected by abuse ... we all pay a very high price in terms of human suffering and lost potential," said Laura Blanchard, Utah County Child Abuse Council.

There are numerous resources available that deal with both the prevention and aftermath of child abuse. A complete directory of the various resources available can be obtained by contacting the Utah County Child Abuse Council.

Suspected cases of child abuse or neglect can be reported by calling the Utah State Division of Family Services at 374-7800. The after-hours child abuse hot line is 376-8261. The caller can remain anonymous.

Court plans to auction Dove property

By FRED LOWRY
Universe Staff Writer
and Associated Press

The court-appointed trustee for the bankrupt grocery chain owner Deon Dove announced that property in six of Dove's stores will be auctioned off Friday at 10 a.m.

R. Kimball Mosier said the proceeds from the auction will help pay debts owed to TransAmerica Commercial Finance Corp. — one of the leading creditors in the Chapter 7 bankruptcy filed by Dove.

Michael Spence, an attorney representing TransAmerica, said the debt owed to TransAmerica is approximately $4.4 million. Spence said Dove made arrangements with the financial corporation to transfer the personal property and equipment as collateral for the debts owed to the company.

The property to be auctioned off Friday will not include the grocery stores' buildings, but the property inside Dove's Happy Service Markets. These markets are located in Delta, Spanish Fork, Richfield, Mount Pleasant, Kanab, and the company headquarters in Springville.

The property will be auctioned from Mosier's office in Salt Lake City. No companies have yet expressed interest in the property and the worth of the items are unknown, said Mosier.

"Basically, [the items] are worth what they will bring at the auction," Mosier said.

If the bidding at the auction does not appear to be reaching the amount owed to TransAmerica, Spence said the finance corporation may increase the bids on the items to help reach the approximately $4.4 million debt.

According to the Associated Press, Dove has claimed more than $20 million in debts, and last month the Utah County Attorney's Office filed 56 felony charges against Dove.

Dove is accused of underpaying $5 million in sales taxes collected by his grocery stores between 1983 and 1988 by filing false information to the state regarding sales at his stores.

In addition, prosecutors allege he overvalued purchases from one supplier on a loan application and pocketed the $638,000 difference. He also is accused of forging and falsifying other documents.

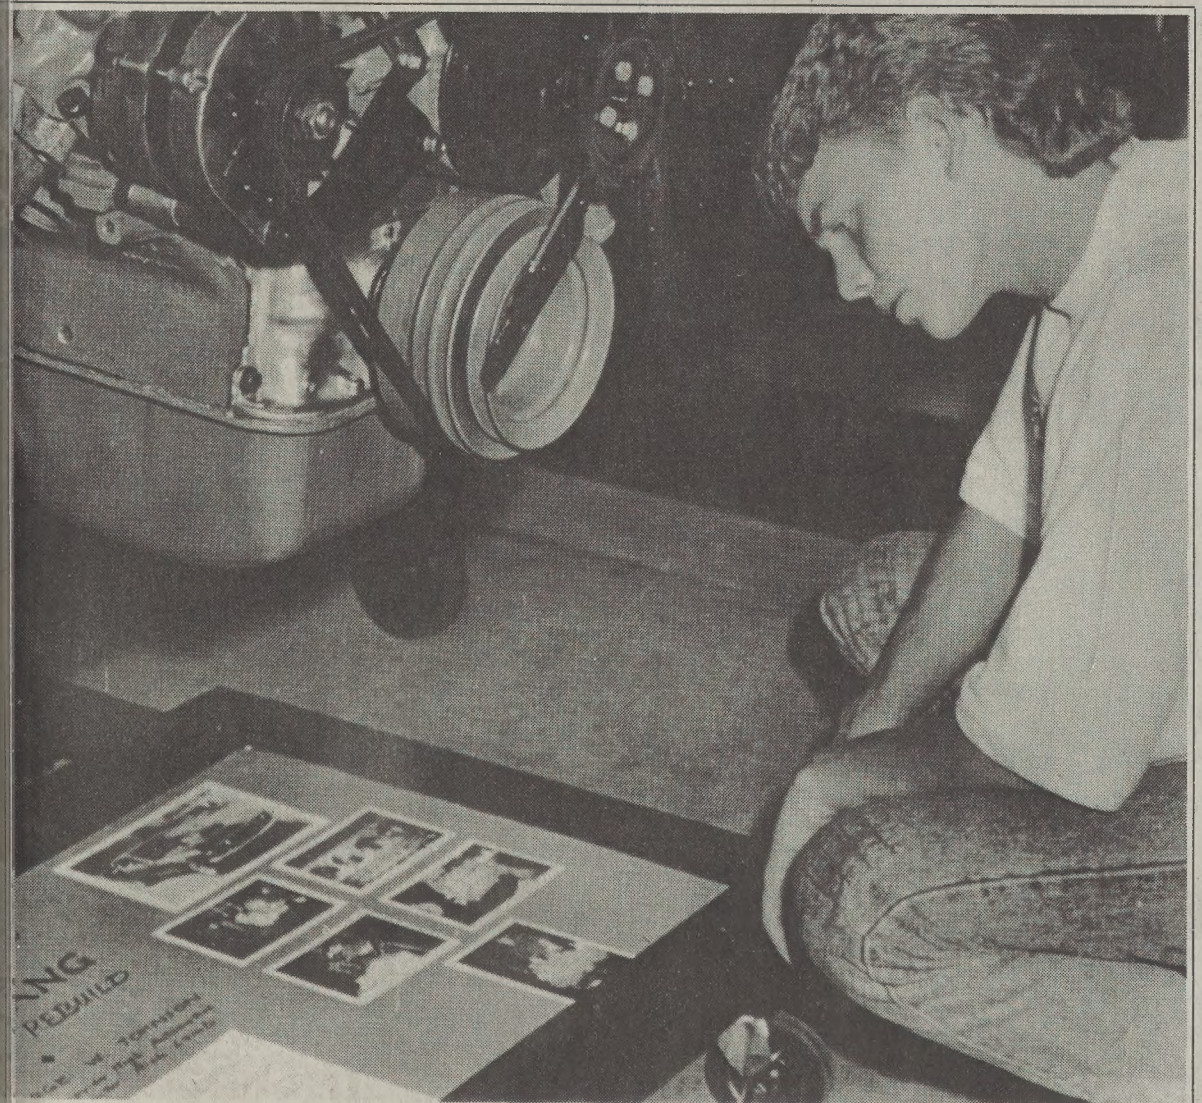

According to the Associated Press, a partial list of the items to be auctioned off includes produce and food cases, freezers, frozen food cases, shelving, electric ovens, meat saws, runner carts, ice machines, cash registers, stock trucks, and miscellaneous meat, produce and bakery equipment.

According to the Utah County District Court, a preliminary hearing for Dove has not yet been scheduled.

U.S. and Soviet arms reports contradict

WASHINGTON — Soviet arms control experts told the House Armed Services Committee Tuesday that their country has cut production of tanks, planes and ships. U.S. intelligence reports have said that Soviet military output continues at previous levels.

Rep. Richard Ray, D-Ga., asked the Soviets to respond to concerns expressed by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and other Americans that the goals of the Soviet Union have really not changed despite the reforms of Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Pentagon and intelligence sources said preliminary data indicated Soviet tank production had risen during the first four months of the year.

But the statistics were under review, and the surge was believed to be temporary and related to plans to close down production lines rather than to reflect Soviet intentions to boost annual output, according to intelligence sources who asked not to be identified.

Andrei Kokoshin, known as one of the architects of the Soviet "new thinking" on military affairs, said weapons production had gone down this year.

Road Sagdeyev, a prominent reformer elected to the newly created Congress of Peoples' Deputies, said Soviet military spending had been cut by 1.5 percent this year, and would be cut by 7 percent next year and 14.2 percent in 1991.

James testifies he did not kill his son

SALT LAKE CITY — Steven Ray James took the stand in his first-degree murder trial Tuesday, denying that he killed his infant son 2 1/2 years ago and then threw his weighted body into the Bear River.

James said that he loved 3-month-old Steven Roy James, having named the child for himself and his father, Roy James.

"I was a learning father, but a happy father," he said. "Almost anytime I could have him with me I would have him with me.... I was proud of him."

In his testimony Tuesday, James denied allegations by the child's mother, Victoria DeLeon, that he had abused the baby.

Earlier Tuesday, the prosecution rested its case after calling Utah State Prison inmate Ron Ray Peterson.

Peterson, who was incarcerated in the Cache County Jail with James in November and December 1986, said he heard James acknowledge the killing to another inmate identified only as "John."

"He said he'd done it," Peterson said.

Ozone-harming air conditioners banned

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Vermont is becoming the first state to ban car air conditioners that use a chemical linked to destruction of the atmosphere's ozone layer, which protects the Earth from harmful ultraviolet radiation.

Car air conditioners are the single largest source of the U.S. contribution to ozone depletion, according to scientists and testimony before legislative committees.

Gov. Madeleine Kunin has hailed the bill, passed May 2 and which she is expected to sign within the next two weeks, as "landmark legislation."

Starting with the 1993 model year, the legislation would ban the sale or registration of cars equipped with air conditioners that use chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, for coolant. Car air conditioners were singled out partly because they use CFC12, considered the most damaging type of CFC to the ozone layer. Home refrigerators use a different type of CFC.

Scientists say if the ozone layer is damaged, extra radiation is let in. The radiation increases incidences of skin cancer and eye disease and damages plants and animals crucial to the food chain.

Mom charged with baby's cocaine death

ROCKFORD, Ill. — The mother of an infant whose death was linked to cocaine abuse during pregnancy has been charged with involuntary manslaughter, and the prosecutor defended his action Tuesday against growing criticism.

"The actions of this office reflect the concern, sometimes the outrage, of this community that children are born ... at risk, both at birth and for many years," said Winnebago County State's Attorney Paul Logli.

But medical and social services officials said the charge could backfire and prevent cocaine-abusing mothers-to-be from seeking help.

"It's the incorrect approach. You want to develop an atmosphere where they know they can come into the health-care system and not be penalized. A punitive approach is not going to benefit the children," said Dr. Ira J. Chasnoff at Northwestern University Medical School, who has directed studies on the effects of prenatal cocaine use.

Poll says residents approve of Geneva

A Dan Jones and Associates survey in Utah County confirmed what Geneva Steel claimed to be the public opinion "all along," said Geneva Steel's Media Relations Manager.

"The company has a positive feeling about the results of the survey," said Micheal Call.

The survey, commissioned by Geneva Steel and conducted by Dan Jones and Associates, a research firm in Salt Lake City, revealed that 76 percent of the people polled felt that Utah County residents were either very or somewhat supportive of Geneva Steel. Conducted in April, the survey consisted of a random sample size of 401 adult residents throughout Utah County.

Although 81 percent of those polled felt pollution was the most important issue facing Utah County, the poll also showed that the same percentage considered the jobs created by the company to be a positive aspect. According to the poll, 56 percent of those surveyed felt that the jobs provided by Geneva Steel do not compensate for any air pollution created.

35 drug-related arrests made during police raid

By RANETTE WRIGLEY
Universe Staff Writer

A three- to four-month joint investigation between the Provo police and the Utah County Sheriff's Office has resulted in drug-related arrests of 35 individuals.

Early Monday morning police raided selected Provo residences. Those arrested in the raid will be charged with third degree felonies, said Lt. Keith Peuscher, of the Provo police department. Sentencing will be given on an individual basis depending on prior records and number of charges and will take several weeks, according to the County Clerk's Office.

Judge gives jail sentence to former city employee

Associated Press

FARMINGTON — A former secretary to the Layton Police Chief who earlier pleaded guilty to one charge of misusing public money has been sentenced to jail and community service.

Virginia Johnson, 33, West Valley City, pleaded guilty to the charge in April and was sentenced to spend 15 days in the Davis County Jail and perform 100 hours of community service. Second District Court Judge Rodney Page also ordered Johnson to pay a $500 fine. According to court records, the misuse occurred in Layton in 1988 when Johnson was employed by the police department. She left that job and a part-time position as a Roy Fire Department dispatcher last summer, said Layton Police Chief Doyle Talbot.

Harward said that in exchange for the guilty plea, a second charge involving a check drawn on insufficient funds would not be filed. He said Johnson agreed to pay full restitution to the court and in the check incident.

Defendants have been taken to the Provo City Courthouse and are awaiting sentencing. Peuscher said the drugs came from an "organized group," but the origin of the drugs has not been determined at this time.

The Provo Police department and the Utah County Sheriff's Office plan to continue investigation into the source of the drugs.

The time to invest in a great company is before it's a great company.

Big, well-established companies may be sound investments.

But often they don't yield the kind of returns an aggressive investor looks for. Their very size and success limits their growth.

That's why so many investors who seek higher returns find the stocks offered by The Stuart-James Company attractive.

You see, we specialize in young, entrepreneurial companies that, in our judgment, offer extraordinary growth opportunities.

Now, it goes without saying that where the opportunities for rewards are so great, there's higher risk. But when one of these companies does succeed, the upside potential is virtually unlimited.

It happens more than you think.

One recent study showed that in the last 13 years, when the stocks in the Standard & Poor's 500 appreciated 260%, the entrepreneurial companies in the Venture Capital 100 index went up 1,632%*

What's more, at Stuart-James, we can enhance your prospects considerably. Each company we recommend is researched exhaustively: Only one company in fifty survives our scrutiny.

Obviously, aggressive investments like these shouldn't make up anybody's entire portfolio. But they do belong in a diversified investment program.

Because after all, the greatest rewards don't come from investing in today's great companies.

But from investing in tomorrow's.

2,000-year-old mummy discovered

Researchers excavate cemetery

STEPHANIE MORRISON
Universe Staff Writer

A 2,000-year-old mummy was recently found in an un plundered tomb in the Siwa Oasis, Egypt, said a BYU professor.

It is, by every opinion I've been able to get, the finest preserved mummy from the late, pre-Christian period of Egyptian history," said C. W. Griggs, professor of ancient Egyptology at BYU and director of the excavations.

In January, a team of researchers travels to Siwa for a few days to excavate an ancient Egyptian cemetery that covers more than 10 square miles, said Dr. Marvin Kuchar, a member of the team.

The archaeological team this year was made of seven individuals. Griggs was accompanied by dig assistants: Revell Phillips, professor of geology at BYU, who was in charge of mapping the site and outlining the geologic history of the area; and Marvin Kuchar, professor of clothology and textiles, who is analyzing fabrics and other materials found in the tomb. Three paleopathologists from Chinese universities were also involved in the dig.

Twelve tomb complexes were excavated this year, said Kuchar. As the team worked, the tombs were being cleared of debris. Griggs said he noticed a rock in the wall at the floor level that did not belong there. He said the workers removed the rock floor and the team found that they had found an un plundered tomb.

Griggs said that they found a small mummy at the opening of the tomb. He believes this mummy to be that of a three- or four-year-old child. The mummy appears to have a few abnormalities, and the research team looks forward to completing additional research on the mummy, he said.

A team of BYU researchers recently revealed this 2,000-year-old mummy buried in an ancient Egyptian cemetery. The mummy's gold death mask is heavily gilded and depicts traditional scenes from the Egyptian funerary world. The mummy was found in an un plundered tomb.

Kuchar said that the team has previously drawn conclusions from pieces of death masks, tools and articles, and that they had hoped to find something the plunderers had overlooked. He also said that this discovery of an un plundered tomb is the first one that has found a mummy completely intact. Usually, he said, the face mask is torn and the gold is stripped from it.

Griggs said that this year's discovery addresses several questions that the BYU team wants to answer.

"Now we can say what the pieces of the puzzle mean that we've been finding for years. We can say how they all fit together, not only for us, but for many, many archaeologists who have come across damaged or disturbed late-period burials."

The 2,000 year-old mummy's head is covered with an exquisite, heavily gilded, gold death mask that portrays a woman in the prime of her life, said Griggs.

The mummy is believed to have been prepared between 100 B.C. and

A.D. 100, said Kuchar. The body was prepared by placing a mask over the head, putting a breastplate over the body, wrapping the body with many layers of linen and garlanding the body with four different kinds of flowers, said Griggs.

"There was a considerable amount of devotion and attention given to this mummy," said Griggs, who believes that the spray of flowers on the chest and the bed of flowers in the coffin show the love and devotion shown to a young woman in death.

Date rape is a problem on university campuses

By TYLER L. NEBEKER
Universe Staff Writer

There were 653 rapes reported on college campuses, according to a survey conducted by USA Today.

A University of Maryland girl recently was raped by a friend she had known for more than seven months. That situation has commonly been called date rape.

According to Paul Bringhurst, Crime Prevention Specialist for BYU University Police, "Date rape is the biggest problem on campuses across the nation. It's a dating situation, the people know each other, but it is still rape."

A seminar conducted by Bringhurst and University Police will be held Thursday in 357 ELWC. The seminar will present tips on rape prevention and what to do after becoming a victim.

Bringhurst will also discuss how sex crimes may progress in nature. Sexual crimes can begin with such things as pornography and obscene phone calls, and then progressively worsen until the act of rape occurs.

Even though no cases of rape have been reported on the BYU campus for many years, that does not mean that rape does not occur in this area, Bringhurst said. Rapes may be occurring, but they are not being reported, he said.

Rape is an act of violence, not an act of sexual passion. Rapists tend to victimize females who look vulnerable or easily intimidated, he said.

But, it can happen to anyone. A person in a seductive dress is no more likely to be assaulted than any other person.

Rapists usually plan out a rape, and continue to rape until they are stopped, according to a BYU University Police pamphlet.

The recent execution of Ted Bundy brought much attention to rape.

Princeton University reported two attacks on female students this year. At Cornell University, in 1983, two co-eds were murdered in their dorm rooms. Surprisingly, after one of the assaults, Cornell made a claim that Cornell had no legal duty to provide adequate security for students.

Graphics exhibit captures nature

GINNY BITZ
Universe Staff Writer

Plants, animals, trees, birds, and mythology all have one thing in common.

They have all been the subjects of posters designed by graphics artist Norman Magleby.

Magleby's posters are on campus announcing the new and classic art classes.

Magleby is Art Director of the Young University's Graphic Communications and is a graphic artist responsible for the design of the art exhibit.

The exhibit will be on display at the Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum.

The exhibit officially opens Saturday and will continue until May 31.

The posters are done in a wide array of colors, capturing the essence of nature while at the same time attracting attention of those passing by.

Magleby's particularly clever poster is one with an illustration of a lemon.

Magleby said, "Don't let the last minute of the art exhibit squeeze give you a sour lemon."

When asked how he comes up with the ideas, Magleby said, "I like things that are my favorite visual subjects, and I like nature colors and I've tied them in too."

Magleby is currently serving on the board of directors for the American Institute of Graphic Arts.

Although many of Magleby's posters are of a humorous nature, his work on a poster he entitled the "Wave of Peace" has been voted the "Most Memorable Poster in the World" by design professionals and public representatives in 40 countries.

The posters are a product of brainstorming on the part of Magleby and copywriter Norman Darais. "The administration kept requesting posters reminding students to register and pay their tuition so we decided to come up with a theme that would camouflage the messages students are confronted with so often," said Magleby.

When asked if he's worried about running out of ideas for new posters, Magleby replied, "I wondered about that, so the other day I sat down and tried to write down all the ideas I could still work posters around and I came up with 50, so I guess I'm not all that worried."

Magleby is currently serving on the board of directors for the American Institute of Graphic Arts.

The 13th annual Young Craftsman's Fair, a display and competition for high-tech and industrial art students from Utah's junior high and high schools, is taking place in the Ernest L. Wilkinson Center today until 3 p.m.

The displays and competition will encompass such areas as graphic arts, woodworking, computer design, crafts and electronics.

A skills contest, awards and display of projects are the three main purposes of this fair, said Jerry Grover, BYU professor of industrial education. The fair is sponsored by the BYU Department of Industrial Education. "One of the main highlights of the fair is the exposure it gives to the students as well as an opportunity to show their work...It's a real eye-opener for them," Grover said.

BYU faculty, staff and graduating industrial education students are in charge of the displays and will be judging the skills competition.

The competing students are intrigued by the work that is displayed and this motivates them to strive harder to enter worthy projects for the competition, said Leon Rogers, BYU professor of industrial education.

"Many feel that industrial education programs should be cut from high school curriculums, but these classes teach skills, craftsmanship and give the students a sense of pride in themselves and their accomplishments," he said.

All of Utah's junior high and high schools were invited to the fair. About 39 high schools and about 29 junior high schools are expected to enter projects and compete in the skills portion of the fair.

Imagination is key to fantasy art
Science fiction artists capture unreal in perceptible form

PAT BIRKEDAH
Senior Reporter

The ability to transfer the vision of a world unseen onto canvas requires talent, skill and a heavyweight imagination.

Science fiction and fantasy artists capture the elusive, the intangible, and the unreal in a perceptible form. SF&F art is both illustrative (art on book covers, for example) and art for art's sake.

At BYU, the Art Department nourishes fine art and the Department of Design focuses on principles of illustration. SF&F art is fostered by two student enterprises: the Leading Edge Magazine and the annual SF&F symposium, Life, the Universe and Everything.

James C. Christensen, associate professor of art, is a fantasy artist whose work is considered fine art based on critical acclaim and his success as a gallery artist.

Christensen was featured in the Spring 1988 issue of BYU Studies. The article, "Winged Words," describes Christensen's development as a fantasy artist. "When I began taking fantasy work seriously, I used it primarily as illustration. I painted the pictures in my mind that grew as I read people's books," Christensen said. "Now, however, the 'fantasies' are my own and my choices are more symbolic. I'm using metaphors and fantasy parables to tell stories that will teach, inform, enlighten and even amuse."

Richard Hull, an illustration instructor in the Design Department, said the market for fine art is much smaller than the market for illustration. Christensen has moved beyond illustration, but many artists choose success in illustrative art as a professional goal.

Michael Whelan is the leading fantasy illustrator. He has enjoyed unparalleled success in winning SF&F's highest honors for illustration. In February 1987, Whelan visited BYU as artist guest of honor for BYU's annual SF&F symposium, Life, the Universe, and Everything VI. The Art Department sponsored a show of Whelan's work in the HFAC's Secured Gallery.

Interviewed later about his impressions of BYU, Whelan said BYU has "the best Art Department I've ever seen for total commitment of resources and development of art skills." Whelan said if he had known about BYU as a beginning artist with the goal of being an illustrator, he might have gone to BYU.

Doug Cootey, a junior from Boston, Mass., majoring in painting, saw Whelan's exhibit in the Secured Gallery. Cootey said that when he saw Whelan's work he suddenly knew he wanted to be an illustrative artist.

A transfer student from Massachusetts College of Art, Cootey began his study at BYU in the Design Department but then transferred to art. "I want to do book covers," Cootey said, "and you have to be a painter. It (design) seemed oriented to problem solving and not with learning how to paint or draw like the art department."

Cootey said, "You also need to know how to sell your art. They don't teach you that in fine arts. The design and fine arts program are so polar. Integration would be much better for my goals."

There are no specific classes in either art or design focusing on SF&F art. Hull said a senior illustration class, Design 445, has a three-week segment taught by Jim Christensen. It is the only time a design class is specifically directed at fantasy art, said Hull. "In the illustrative area, the students are able to work in various directions," said Hull.

Christensen said two students in the Art Department, Bill Carman and Michael Woodbury, are interested in fantasy art. BYU's most unique opportunities for developing SF&F artists are not through any academic department. The annual student-run SF&F symposium — Life, the Universe, and Everything — provides special lectures, demonstrations and art shows.

Fantasy art is a combination of real and imaginary images. Summers is a staff illustrator with the Leading Edge Magazine.

A science fiction and fantasy magazine produced at BYU by an all volunteer staff, the Leading Edge, is a training ground for SF&F artists.

Cootey is art chairman for the SF&F symposium. He organized a student art show to coincide with the last symposium. He hopes to have more students participate in Life, the Universe, and Everything VIII which is scheduled for February 1990.

Cootey is also art director of the Leading Edge. "I've organized a program that simulates a professional environment, but it is a learning experience," Cootey said.

The Utah Arts Council recently awarded a $1,850 grant to support the Leading Edge. Inscap, a BYU student literary journal, received a $500 grant from the arts council.

Agency helps couples adopt children

By DAVID P. OLSEN
Universe Staff Writer

A child can bring irreplaceable joy into the life of a family, however; there are those unfortunate instances when couples are unable to have children. A special adoption agency has been established to help couples who are unable to have children.

The Children's Aid Society of Utah offers free confidential services to mothers who are unable to care for their babies and want to put them up for adoption.

"We provide counseling and share in the selection of adoptive families," said Julie Pratt a case worker for the Children's Aid Society.

The major concern for unwed birth mothers is they are alone and have the fear of providing and caring for a child without support.

"It would not have been in the child's best interest for me to raise him," said a 22-year-old mother who gave her baby up for adoption. "It is not that I did not love the baby, but it was the most selfless thing I could have done for him."

All couples who apply to adopt a baby with the Children's Aid Society must have no other children. "We want to spread the happiness of having a baby in the home and not give the child to a family with 11 kids," Pratt said.

According to Pratt, the families who receive the babies into their homes are very thankful to the birth mother.

"As we look at our baby we are so grateful for the loving sacrifice that her birth mother provided," said a couple who recently adopted a child.

"Our office in Provo handles three to four adoptions a year, most of the work we do consists of counseling birth mothers and adoptive families," Pratt said. "On the national average 96 percent of those cases where a child is born out of wedlock the child is kept and a family is started."

There are times when the mother decides that it would be better to put the child up for adoption. A 19-year-old girl who gave up her child said, "I still had to grow up. I had to go to school and prepare for the time when it was right for me to be a mother."

The Children's Aid Society specializes in adoptive services for the entire community.

"We consider ourselves a non-denominational group that caters to everyone despite their religion," said Pratt.

"The difference between our service and the state Social Services is that the state terminates the rights of the parents where in our case the choice is the right of the mother."

One unusual aspect about the Children's Aid Society is the birth mother is able to set the requirements for the parents who will adopt her baby.

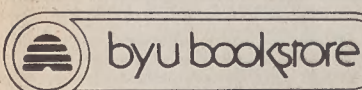

Being involved in the selection process gives the adoptive couples a strong desire to provide for the child, Pratt said.

Another service the Children's Aid

Society provides is the arrangement of a letter and photographs of the baby to be sent to the birth mothers.

BYU baseball team will close the season play today as it meets at the Utes' home field at 2 p.m. The Cougars' top pitcher John DeSilva (3.58) will pitch the final conference game against Utah's Craig Sudberry (4.66). BYU is in first place in the Western Athletic Conference with a record (42-14 overall). Utah's record stands at 10-17 (17-29).

Jordan and the Bulls beat Knicks; Warriors burn Suns at home

Trailing by eight points with less than four minutes to go in regulation, the New York Knicks went cold in the second half. The Chicago Bulls and eventually won in overtime 120-109 in New York Tuesday night.

Michael Jordan led the Bulls attack with his first triple double of the season, scoring 34 points with 12 assists and 11 rebounds. The Knicks held Jordan to 12 shots, scoring only 25 points in regulation play compared to their 44 playoff average. But Jordan responded in overtime scoring nine points to lead the Bulls 15 points.

The Knicks, ahead by 10 points late in the fourth quarter, went scoreless in the last 3:43 of regulation. The Bulls then went on an eight-point run, sending the game into overtime.

Chicago scored the last 11 points of the game, pulling ahead and never looking back, as they held the Knicks to only six points in the final 8:41 of action.

In a losing effort, Johnny Newman led all Knicks scorers with 27 points, 14 of which were scored in the final minutes of the third quarter. Patrick Ewing had 22 points and nine rebounds.

In other NBA action, the Golden State Warriors shocked the heavily favored Phoenix Suns at home 127-122 and will return home with a split in victories.

Golden State's Mitch Richmond, NBA Rookie of the year this season, fueled the Warriors with 25 points and 13 rebounds and was a perfect eight for eight from the free throw line.

Golden State had a 65-64 lead at half time over the Suns. The two teams played a very close game which saw 21 different lead changes. With a chance to tie the game with seven seconds remaining the Suns Kevin Johnson missed a three-point attempt which gave the Warriors the victory.

Chris Mullin lead the Warriors with 37 points, 10 better than his regular season average. Mullin converted two free throws with no time remaining for the final points of the game.

Phoenix was led by best sixth man of the year award recipient Eddie Johnson with 35 points. Former Ute Tom Chambers finished with 20 points for the Suns.

Both series' resume on Thursday night.

After winning the Western Athletic Conference championship BYU senior David Harkness has moved up to the number 19 spot in the latest Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association Rankings.

The rankings are for up to the 24th of April.

Harkness has qualified for and will be participating in the NCAA Championships held May 19-28 at the University of Georgia.

In men's doubles, Harkness and his partner junior Johnny Mattice are presently ranked 12th nationally.

They were upset last week in the semi-final round of the WAC Championships held at the University of New Mexico.

In women's tennis, BYU Cougar Mary Beth Young, a junior from La Habra California, is currently ranked 16th.
